TULLY.

S I R,

Have already taken Notice, that the Craftsman's implacable Hatred to the Ministry proceeds from Disappointment, and the predominant Spirit of Ambition; and that, rather than not effectuate this darling Point, he would invert the Constitution, destroy Liberty itself, and reduce us to native Anarchy and Confusion; the Veracity of which being so clearly confirmed by the Folly and Rashness of his own Writings, that it needs no farther Demonstration: I shall therefore confine myself at present to some useful Remarks on the Danger of this over-bearing Passion.

THE greatest Patriot that ever shone among the Sons of Heaven, that was the most firmly attached to the Publick Good, and the general Interest of Mankind, perhaps was TULLY. This sublime and glorious Man was Master of all the Virtue and Wisdom of a Philosopher; of all the Art and Persuasion of Eloquence; of all the Charms of Rhetorick; and of all the Valour and Fortitude of the Hero; and as he deserved, so he happily reigned in the highest Favour and Esteem with Men of every Rank and Distinction in Rome, and all the Provinces thereof. What raised him to this universal Love and Admiration; what elevated him to the highest Offices of Honour and Dignity, and thus endeared him to all that knew him, was the Accuteness of his Wit, the Penetration, Solidity, and Correctness of his Judgment, the Sweetness and Energy of his Orations, the Delight which he took in defending the Injured and Oppressed, in reproving such as were guilty of Fraud, Rapine and Cruelty: Nor was his Candour and Integrity, his Humanity, Benevolence and Generosity to all that merited well, either in the Arts and Sciences, or in the Republick, less amiable and attractive to all who approached him. Tho' many and great Examples might be given of what is said, I shall only choose to cite one or two short ones. When Verres, who presided over the Sicilians, had been guilty of many Acts of Avarice, Lust, Extortion, and Rapacity, had plundered the Province, and despoiled its Temples of their sacred Shrines and Images, the distressed and miserable People applied themselves in a Body to their Patron, and supplicated him for Relief, who, out of Regard to a Promise that he had made them, of never being wanting to their Interest, undertakes the Cause, and obtains the Liberty of impeaching their Depopulator; yet, to shew with how much Reluctancy he accuses, he argues thus: Tuli graviter & acerbe, Sc. Oration in 2. Caelium. — 'I am sorely and grievously troubled, my Lords, to be reduced to such Straits, that either these poor Sufferers, who have fled to me, and implore my Aid and Protection, should be deceived in their Expectations, or that I, who, from the Flower of my Youth, have been engaged in the Defence of Mankind, should be constrained, by Necessity and Obligation, to act the Part of an Accuser.' Here you have a lively Image of the Modesty of the greatest and best of Patriots, how unwilling he was to accuse the most profligate and basest of Men! How moving also does he reason in favour of Marcus Marcellus, who sat in Senate with him, and was his contemporary in the same Studies! with whom there is commonly more Envy than Love. M. enim Marcellus vobis, P. C. relique publica reddito, Sc. For since M. Marcellus, my Lords, is restored again to his Country, and the Honour of sitting among you, I greatly indulge myself in hoping, that not only his, but also my own Freedom and Gravity of Speech is preserved and secured to you and the Republick; for I grieved and was vehemently concerned when I saw this noble Lord, who, together with myself, bore Arms against the invincible Caesar, not to be in the same Favour, and re-instated in the same Dignity; nor could I be persuaded to esteem it as an Act of Impartiality and Justice for me to be conversant in the August Assembly of this Honourable House, while he, who, with Emulation, cultivated and laboured in the same Studies and Applications as myself, was, as an intimate and Bosom Companion, torn and rend- ed from my Embraces.' These and such like pathetic Sayings, so deeply gained the Attention of that victorious Emperor, so strongly operated upon his Mind, as caused his Soul to relent, and dissolve in Tears, who, after he had carried his Ambition as high as he could, after he had triumphed over the whole World, conquered himself; which our Author, with all the Wisdom of a Philosopher, thus extols and commends: Nulla est enim tanta vis, Sc. 'There is no Power so strong, no Force so prevalent, which may not, by the sovereign Power of the Sword and Arms, be weakened, defeated, and destroyed; but to subdue our Passions, to soften Anger, to be mild, humane, and merciful, amidst the Arrogance of Fortune, and the Insolence of Victory; not only to raise an Adversary, who is of noble Birth, famous for his Wit and Virtue, after he was greatly fallen beneath himself, but also to enlarge his Dignity, and invest him with all the Ornaments thereof, in my Opinion, not only equals the Greatest of Worthies, but bears the nearest Similitude to the Divine Being.' Such was the Tenderness of this great Patriot to all that were in Distress, to all that deserved Pity and Compassion; but, above all, his Country was the darling Object of his Heart. From his inflexible Love and pure Zeal to her, he derived all his Ambition, and in her center'd all his chief and ultimate Desires: A Proof of which we may see in his Oration against Cataline, Certe verendum mihi non erat, Sc. 'Without doubt I have no Reason to fear, lest, in cutting off this Parricide of his fellow Citizens, the least Envy should devolve upon me from Posterity. But if this was never so near, never so strongly impending over me, I was always of this Opinion, that Envy which attends Virtue and Honour, is Glory, and not Envy.' I must beg Leave to trouble the Reader with one more Citation, from his Oration for Marcellus, to shew how much he was devoted to the Love of Peace, and the publick Tranquility: All which I thought it was necessary to render into English, lest they should happen to fall into Hands, who are not so happy as to be well enough acquainted with the Original as to understand it; and that they may be the better able to compare our modern Patriots, the Craftsman and his Pupils, with this great Patron before them. Quo quidem in bello semper de pace agendum, audiendumque esse putavi; semperque dulci, non modo pacem, sed orationem etiam civium pacem flagitantium repudiari. Both before and after this fatal War burst out, I always deem'd it best to urge the Advantages of Peace, and the Necessity of complying therewith; and was always concern'd to see that not only Peace, but also the Reasons of such as earnestly intreated and sued for it, were refus'd and rejected.' Such was his constant Advice, and such always were his Counsels. One would have thought therefore, that so many and so great Virtues, such excellent Abilities, with which this God-like Man was endued, might have been sufficient to have secured him from the Hands of Ruffians, and an untimely End. But alas! what can withstand the Torrent of Fury and Vengeance when it comes rushing upon us? In him it was Virtue, Honour, and Glory, to act as he always did; in the Craftsman's Rage, Ignorance and Shame; he bravely struggled to preserve the Republick, of Rome against Tyrants, Oppressors and Usurpers; the Craftsman infamously labours to destroy the Constitution of England against its Guardians, Protectors, and Defender. Since nothing therefore could preserve this great and good Man, from being lopped off by the Hands of Assassins, the World may justly admire, that the Craftsman should so fondly imitate the Profligates of Cataline, and not tremble at the Punishment and Ruin which their wicked Actions brought upon them.

I am, S I R,

Your very humble Servant,

WILL. HINT.

The same Day Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas, sometime since convicted for keeping a disorderly House in Denmark Court in the Strand, was brought up to the Court of King's Bench, in order to receive Judgment; but in regard to her ill State of Health, the Court deferred it till next Term, and she was remanded back.

For ASTHMA's and CONSUMPTIONS,

That have been Sold so many Years, and with such uncommon Success and Benefit to the Publick, by Mr. Parry, and his Predecessors, in Boar's-Head-Court, Fleet-street; but, since Mr. Parry's Decease, are now sold only by Mr. Read for 3 s. 6d. a Vial, at his House in White-Fryars. They are a most Incomparable and never-failing Medicine for the immediate Relief and perfect Cure of the most confirmed ASTHMA of the longest standing: And all Sorts of CONSUMPTIONS, even when so far advanced, as not to be cured by any other Medicine in the World.

FOR their Virtues vastly exceed any Thing that ever was published, or even known in the whole World, in the Cure of the worst Asthma's and Consumptions of all Sorts, Coughs, Colds, Catarrhs, &c.

They instantly relieve the Patient in the most suffocating Fit of an Asthma, and make a perfect Cure in a very short Time; for they gently open the Breast, and immediately give Liberty of Breathing, without danger of taking Cold; they admirably allay the Tickling, which provokes frequent Coughing, and take off the uneasy Sensation of acrimonious Humours, cleanse the small Glands, relax the Fibres, and thereby enlarge the Capacities of the Vessels; thus they regularly and quickly Cure the most obstinate Asthma of the longest standing.

They speedily and to Admiration cure all Sorts of Consumptions, Ulcers of the Lungs, &c. removing all Obstructions of the Breast, and Lungs, Hoarseness, Wheezing, Soreness, Shortness of Breath, and all the usual Symptoms which attend the Beginnings of a Consumption; and, if taken in time, will infallibly prevent one when seated. They are also exceeding nutritive and strengthening to Persons of weakly Constitutions, and have no other sensible Operation than as mentioned above.

And by Parity of Reasoning this most excellent Medicine is (and well known to be) the most sovereign Remedy in the World for those troublesome Spending Coughs, which many are severely troubled with Night and Morning; also for the Cough, and Hooping-Cough in Children, having cured Thousands; and are so pleasant, and so few Drops to a Dose, that Children take them with Pleasure, and without any Confinement.

In short, these unparalleled Chymical Drops are the most infallible Remedy that ever was known (therefore they deserve the faint Efforts of any Counterfeiters or Imitators) for the Ailments above-mentioned, and allowed to be so by the most Judicious amongst the Learned in Physick; and confirmed by the largest Experience in private Practice, are therefore most for Publick Common Good.
